

Revisiting Seehausen et al 1997

January 10, 2018 |

This is a very interesting blog series by theoretical ecologist Hari Sridhar. He interviews authors of well-known publications in ecology and evolution to find out about the genesis of the publication, the impact of the publication on the author's career and research, and what the author thinks about the content of the publication today.

The idea is to publish a collection of 'shadow papers', so to speak, that capture the past and future of these publications.
